M-WAVE SURFS OVER TO THE BUZZ FARM

Leading satellite products distributor and value-added service provider selects rapidly growing full-service agency for online advertising initiative.

Bayside, NY – July 6, 2006 – The Buzz Farm announced today that they were chosen by M-Wave DBS, Inc. to develop an online advertising program to help drive sales via the company’s website and call center. Headquartered in Franklin Park, Illinois, M-Wave is a leading virtual manufacturer and international procurement firm of Direct Broadcast Satellite installation products.

“The origin of our relationship with M-Wave excites us a great deal,” said David Mills, president of The Buzz Farm. “The notion that a team of executives at a leading corporation took note of our work in a trade environment, and sought us out because of it, says it all. However, we are even more pleased that this initiative has accomplished the sales and communications objectives that were set by M-Wave during the development phase of the program.”

Joshua Blake, executive vice president of operations of M-Wave, added, “We noticed some banner ads in the leading industry newsletters and websites that were simply undeniable. Not only were they well executed, but clicking them seemed like an obligatory next step.” He continued, “We were looking to jump start our online sales, and were referred to the creators of these ads by the publisher of this leading online media network. We have been delighted with The Buzz Farm as well as the outstanding results of this program.”
